

Jaw Dropping

By: Kiersten Setting

The movie that I will be reviewing is Fractured directed by Brad Anderson. I have watched this movie once and have watched YouTube videos about the movie. At first the movie has you feeling really bad for this little family of three. The parents are fighting and the daughter doesn't really know what's going on. The entire movie is just a mind game because Ray, the father, is showing the movie how he sees it, but he is mentally ill and doesn't see reality. By the end of the movie you see the entire movie differently. It makes you have to think about everything that happened and have to figure out what he switched in his brain and didn't. The audience can relate to this because what you are told could always not be true and be the complete opposite. Some good things about this movie is during the entire lie you believe Ray and nothing else up until the last scene. A bad thing is that there are a lot of plot holes in the story that just never get brought up at the end. So I suggest watching this movie if you want to have your jaw dropped to the floor with surprises going through the entire movie.
