

Squid Game: hold the Squid

By: Kiersten Setting

Squid Game has taken over Netflix with its gory and twisted plot. The show keeps viewers' attention throughout the entire show, putting them on the edge of their seats and while hoping that the character they like will win their life. A lot of viewers, such as Lanie Tobie, say, "Once you start to watch, it's hard to stop." There are plenty of thoughts that go through peoples' heads when they hear the name of the show such as Caitlyn Homolya who thought it was "a reality show" or "something about squids" which neither apply to the show. This is like nothing we've seen before due to it being a show following Korea's regulation instead of the United States. It reflects South Korean culture with the survival of the fittest mindset. Of those viewers who watched the first episode, 66% of the people finished the series in 23 days. The basis of the show is there are 456 players that are in big money trouble for different reasons. They play children's games such as red light green light, tug of war, and more. If they mess up and lose, they lose their life and if they win they move to the next round getting closer to the cash prize that would take them out of debt. This show has caused many Tik Tok trends and also with Halloween coming up plenty of fans will be dressing up as the characters. A second season has already been confirmed to release early 2023.
