

The Enormous Lie

By: Kiersten Setting

When I was little I remember my dad telling me to write down questions while reading the Bible and I was always so confused why there weren't any dinosaurs in it, so I wrote that down and my dad couldn't tell me why they weren't. Apparently I wasn't the only one that thought about this because in 2015 the idea that dinosaurs never existed really became apparent to the public. There is a study on the belief that dinosaurs weren't real and the numbers spiked in the year 2015.

This is obviously a conspiracy theory, but it really makes you think, were dinosaurs actually real? Yes, they are in museums and there are bones found in the ground, but it still just doesn't sit right. How can we think it is ridiculous to believe a dragon ever existed, a dragon is practically a dinosaur except it somehow never existed and is just a mythical creature. So are dinosaurs even real? A mom in England actually did post about not wanting her children to learn about dinosaurs because it is the biggest lie. She didn't want the teachers to teach the subject to her kids and a lot of parents agreed. We are taught in schools about the dinosaurs, and at a very young age this seed is planted in us. Just like how Christopher Columbus was taught to us as the person that discovered America. He was a terrible person that shouldn't be credited for anything and we didn't realize that until we got older, and some people don't even know he's a bad person. It is just taking time for us to realize that these gigantic creatures really did exist.

I don't really think of my original idea when I am deciding whether or not I believe in dinosaurs existing because I don't have the same beliefs anymore. I do know that if a dragon is a mythical creature, it makes it hard to believe that this whole dinosaur thing could be true. Now you might be wondering why would we make up such a huge lie and why do we have archaeologists if there was nothing to find. Well in short they are just people that don't want to grow up and they find big rocks that are different shapes to build what looks like a big monster. As you grow up though, you start to see the real truth of reality and that is to question things that you are taught to not question. Even if it sounds crazy, you should still be questioning things, see where your mind takes you and maybe you will learn about the real truth.
